Abstract of the Invention

Database Commit Control Mechanism that Provides More Efficient Memory Utilization through Consideration of Task Priority

Disclosed is an enhanced database journaling mechanism that results in reduced secondary storage consumption. The memory management mechanism of the present invention reduces journal size, and accordingly, secondary storage utilization by monitoring the effects to the journal by certain transactions and by making one or more adjustments to reduce those effects.

ROC920010232US1